

Below is a list for you of where to go for ACC help, the list is a bit outdated but it's all we have until we can locate more advocates not on the list, please if you know a good advocate can you pass their details to us so we can approach them inviting them to be listed.

Thanks Glen McMillan

Please also contact your case manager and ask for a local advocate's contact details.

I can suggest some general steps you can take to find ACC advocates in New Zealand:

Contact the ACC directly: You can start by reaching out to the Accident Compensation Corporation in New Zealand and inquire if they can provide you with a list of accredited advocates or support organisations that can assist you with your specific needs.

Legal Aid organisations: Contact legal aid organisations or community legal centres in New Zealand. They may be able to connect you with legal professionals or advocates who specialise in ACC cases.

Online directories: Look for online directories or websites that list lawyers and advocates in New Zealand. Some websites may allow you to search for professionals based on their specialisation, including ACC cases.

Local support groups: Reach out to local support groups or organisations that focus on helping individuals with ACC claims. They may be able to provide recommendations or referrals to advocates who can assist you.

Ask for recommendations: Consider asking friends, family members, or colleagues if they know of any ACC advocates or legal professionals who have experience with ACC claims.

Legal referral services: Contact legal referral services in New Zealand that can help connect you with suitable ACC advocates or lawyers.

When you find potential advocates or legal professionals, be sure to research their qualifications, experience, and fees, and consider scheduling consultations to discuss your specific situation before deciding. It's essential to choose someone who can best represent your interests in your ACC claim.

Below are contact details of lawyers and advocates.
